Is there a special law for the rich law-breakers of Kansas City?

They now cry the "Roosevelt peril"—talking to the storm clouds already.

"Bless you, my children; now work for your living"—rather hard knocks for 'em.

The unlicensed piano salesman who was fined in Middlebury struck a discord.

The Old North church in Boston is said to be owned by the British king. If so, let him come over and take it.

Burlington makes a real nice Gretchen Green, and with accommodating legal advisers to guide the matrimonial host.

"Mayor" H. C. Whitcomb of Waterbury fills the bill pretty well, it seems; and Waterbury has honored him with a reelection.

Besides casting only five votes on the local option question at the recent town meeting, Somerset comes into further prominence through its report to the state superintendent of education that it has not one person between the ages of five and eighteen years in its population, and, therefore, it supports no public school. Still it has a vote in the Vermont legislature.

The Brattleboro Reformer does not inform us when an insurgent is not an insurgent; but it has the following to say about Congressman Foster's position: "Congressman D. J. Foster is noted for 'jumping with the cat.' A little while ago he came out openly in opposition to the reelection of Joseph G. Cannon for speaker, and the state rang with praises of his bravery in thus hearding the Danville, Ill., lion. His constituents were pleased to think of him as an insurgent, even if he was an eleventh hour insurgent, and were inclined to forgive his tardiness. But for some reason or other, the Honorable David J. disclaims the title. He says he is neither an insurgent nor a near-insurgent. He made such a statement on the floor of the House the other day in a rather indignant attempt to reply to some sarcastic remarks made by Representative Kitchin of North Carolina about congressmen who were insurgents at home and regulars in Washington. Foster was laughed at by his associates on account of his readiness to put on the coat which Kitchin had fashioned and then claim that it didn't fit. People at home will be inclined to view the incident as another demonstration of Foster's fondness for straddling."

next week, and the secretary of the association divulges the information in the following statement:

"I am very pleased to inform you that Brother Brimblecom, the new president, has been informed by Walter E. Adams, press-agent of the Boston & Albany, that he will be willing to issue passes to members of the association living on the Boston & Albany to attend our regular monthly meeting. If you will apply at once to Mr. Adams to the above effect, you will probably receive a pass to attend the meeting March 14."

On receipt of this, a halt is at once called by the Springfield Republican, which declares that such things might have gone unchallenged once, but not now; and it further states that those passes should remain undrawn. The contemporary's position is in the line of moral progress, and we had supposed that the press association in Massachusetts had got beyond the stage of kneeling to things of such "archaic flavor," as the Republican so aptly expresses the contents of the letter. The acceptance of the Boston & Albany passes might be made without any intent at wrongdoing, but at the same time that acceptance would place the editors under a certain obligation to the railroad, and they would thereby admit it. Plainly, the Boston & Albany railroad, like all other public service corporations, does not expect to give something for nothing; and it would not be issuing free transportation to Massachusetts editors under any different expectation. "Keeping the press placated" is one of the old-style corporation policies, which the press in many sections has denounced and refused to be chained to, so that the frankness with which the secretary of the Massachusetts association states the B. & A.'s proposition is rather startling. We agree with The Republican that newspaper associations ought to stand on their own feet, just like any other association, whose co-operation is not so valuable to the railroads and which is not, therefore, courted by issuance of free transportation.

DISCUSSED MORRILL CENTENARY.

Montpelier Board of Trade Planning for Enthusiastic Celebration.

The Montpelier board of trade held a meeting last night, with a small attendance, and several new members were admitted. Extensive plans were made for the centenary celebration of the birth of Senator Justin S. Morrill, which will be a state celebration, held in the Congregational church, April 14. Joseph A. DeBoer told some of the wishes of Governor G. H. Prouty, in regard to the anniversary and said that George E. Edmunds, one of the ablest men who ever represented Vermont in Congress, had been invited to attend the celebration. It is expected that a large number of former governors of the state and men of prominence within and without the state will be present on that occasion. The program is not yet complete, but it is hoped that it may include an address by President Buckham of the university of Vermont.

The Montpelier Gun club had hoped to get the state league to hold the state convention there, but was unsuccessful, as it will be held in St. Albans. However, a two days' shoot will be held in Montpelier in the near future, and the gun club will offer a prize of $100 toward making the affair a success. The board of trade also voted a cash prize for the same object.

The transportation committee had been in communication with J. P. Gallagher, the local agent of the Central Vermont Railway company in regard to sleeping cars from Montpelier to Boston, New York and Chicago, and it was learned that sleepers could be procured to Boston and Springfield, Mass., but not to the other places mentioned, as the trains for those sections were made up at St. Albans. The regular meeting of the board was followed by a meeting of the board of directors, at which only routine business was transacted.

In compliance with general orders number 230 of the war department, First Lieutenant Charles L. Willard has been assigned to inspect the Co. A signal corps on April 12.

A note from H. M. Brush, class of '09, under date of February 14, shows that he was then located at Marmath, N. D., with a survey party in charge of W. J. Boston. He evidently is having some very interesting experience in preliminary survey and location work. He says that they have lived in tents all winter and have moved on the average of once a week. He adds: "I like the work very much, and the experience is excellent."

James L. Averill, a graduate of Norwich university, '96, and son of Mrs. George Averill, is now holding the responsible position of general manager of the A. E. Norton company, which makes structural steel for large buildings and whose factory is at Boston, N. J. The plant now employs 300 men and is enlarging so that from 400 to 500 men will be employed in the near future. Mr. Averill's success will be noted with pleasure by many old town and college friends.
